Amber Diceless Roleplaying Game

Unspent character points become "good stuff" – a good luck for the character. Players are also allowed to overspend (in moderation), with the points becoming "bad stuff" – bad luck which the Gamemaster should inflict on the character. Stuff governs how non-player characters perceive and respond to the character: characters with good stuff will often receive friendly or helpful reactions, while characters with bad stuff are often treated with suspicion or hostility. mehr

Amber Diceless Roleplaying Game

As well as representing luck, stuff can be seen as representing a character's outlook on the universe: characters with good stuff seeing the multiverse as a cheerful place, while characters with bad stuff see it as hostile. mehr

Arthur Eddington

We therefore have no reason to doubt that the objective world too is "mind-stuff." Dualistic metaphysics, then, cannot be evidentially supported. mehr

Beavis and Butt-head

He also said that MTV was close to selling it to another network, "but it got wrapped up in deal stuff and eventually I stopped asking them about it," and that "it may still come back" as MTV's original network. mehr
